

What is the point? – From the staff point of view

Why do we want to be a Rights Respecting School?

- So children are aware of their rights.
- So children are aware of their rights and other children's rights.
- So children understand what they are entitled to, 'their rights'.
- So that children respect each other.
- So that children are more polite.
- Extend our behaviour policy and promotes good citizenship.
- Children are able to discuss their rights in relation to everyday school life, i.e. behaviour.
- Develop children's awareness.
- Teach respect.
- Develop mutual respect.
- Develop equal opportunities.
- Develops an understanding of different cultures.
- Develops an understanding of diversity.
- Develops empathy for others.
- Raise awareness of the children who don't have rights.
- Help safeguard.

Ideas collected from staff in RRSA staff meeting on Tuesday 6th December 2016